DETAILED ACTION

Specie Election Requirement(s)

FIRST SPECIE ELECTION REQUIREMENT:

This application contains claims directed to more than one species of the generic invention. These species are deemed to lack unity of invention because they are not so linked as to form a single general inventive concept under PCT Rule 13.1.

The species are as follows:

Specie A: Genetic analyses of genes, such as linkage to phenotype

If the above Specie A is elected then the below additional specie election is required.

Specie B: Generic analyses of objects other than genes

Applicant is required, in reply to this action, to elect a single species to which the claims shall be restricted if no generic claim is finally held to be allowable. The reply must also identify the claims readable on the elected species, including any claims subsequently added. An argument that a claim is allowable or that all claims are generic is considered non-responsive unless accompanied by an election.

Upon the allowance of a generic claim, applicant will be entitled to consideration of claims to additional species which are written in dependent form or otherwise include all the limitations of an allowed generic claim as provided by 37 CFR 1.141. If claims are added after the election, applicant must indicate which are readable upon the elected species. MPEP § 809.02(a).

The following claim(s) are generic to the above species: 1-3, 19, 20, and 23

The species listed above do not relate to a single general inventive concept under PCT Rule 13.1 because, under PCT Rule 13.2, the species lack the same or corresponding special technical features for the following reasons:

The above species are distinct in that gene analysis is the analysis of a biological system which is well known to be complex and of critical importance in drug research, medical diagnosis, etc. and generally separately published from generic object analysis which commonly lacks any biological connection. Thus, the search for the above species of object analysis together would be an undue search burden therefore supporting this specie election requirement.

ADDITIONAL SPECIE ELECTION REQUIREMENT ONLY FOR SPECIE A:

This application contains claims directed to more than one species of the generic invention. These species are deemed to lack unity of invention because they are not so linked as to form a single general inventive concept under PCT Rule 13.1.

The species are as follows:

Specie A-1: Genetic analyses directed to a cancer or tumor medical condition

Specie A-2: Generic analyses of genes

Applicant is required, in reply to this action, to elect a single species to which the claims shall be restricted if no generic claim is finally held to be allowable. The reply must also identify the claims readable on the elected species, including any claims subsequently added. An argument that a claim is allowable or that all claims are generic is considered non-responsive unless accompanied by an election.

Upon the allowance of a generic claim, applicant will be entitled to consideration of claims to additional species which are written in dependent form or otherwise include all the limitations of an allowed generic claim as provided by 37 CFR 1.141. If claims are added after the election, applicant must indicate which are readable upon the elected species. MPEP § 809.02(a).

The following claim(s) are generic to the above species within specie A claims: 1-12, 16-20, 22, and 23

The species listed above do not relate to a single general inventive concept under PCT Rule 13.1 because, under PCT Rule 13.2, the species lack the same or corresponding special technical features for the following reasons:

The above species are distinct in that gene analysis as directed to cancer or tumor study, diagnosis, and treatment, has been a major medical/scientific issue now for decades, separate from other disease conditions, which is well known to be specifically complex and of critical importance in drug research, medical diagnosis, etc. and generally separately published from generic gene analysis. Thus, the search for the above species of object analysis together would be an undue search burden therefore supporting this specie election requirement.

SECOND SPECIE ELECTION REQUIREMENT:

This application contains claims directed to more than one species of the generic invention. These species are deemed to lack unity of invention because they are not so linked as to form a single general inventive concept under PCT Rule 13.1.

The species are as follows:

Art Unit: 1631

Specie C: methods without financial stock performance identification

Specie D: methods with financial stock performance identification (e.g. claim 10)

Applicant is required, in reply to this action, to elect a single species to which the claims shall be restricted if no generic claim is finally held to be allowable. The reply must also identify the claims readable on the elected species, including any claims subsequently added. An argument that a claim is allowable or that all claims are generic is considered non-responsive unless accompanied by an election.

Upon the allowance of a generic claim, applicant will be entitled to consideration of claims to additional species which are written in dependent form or otherwise include all the limitations of an allowed generic claim as provided by 37 CFR 1.141. If claims are added after the election, applicant must indicate which are readable upon the elected species. MPEP § 809.02(a).

The following claim(s) are generic to the above species: claims: 1-9 and 11-23

The species listed above do not relate to a single general inventive concept under PCT Rule 13.1 because, under PCT Rule 13.2, the species lack the same or corresponding special technical features for the following reasons:

The above species are distinct in that stock performance analysis is a separate and distinct as well as well known complex subject matter which is not generally published or described specifically with methods of classification of objects via a multidimensional space which is remaining subject matter of the instant claims. Thus, the search for the above species of object analysis and financial stock analysis together would be an undue search burden therefore supporting this specie election requirement.

Art Unit: 1631

The inventions are distinct, each from the other because of reasons given above.

Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art because of their recognized divergent subject matter, the above lack of unity of invention determination for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

Applicant is advised that the reply to this requirement to be complete must include an election of the invention to be examined even though the requirement be traversed (37 CFR 1.143).
